

Crime Prevention Certification Course Description

This course is intended to provide a basic understanding of the theory and practice of proactive policing strategies and approaches. Utilizing the combination of adult learner methodologies of multi-media presentations, group exercise and lecture the instructor will prepare the student to utilize the proven techniques of crime prevention in today's environment.

Specifically, the course will provide the practitioner a working knowledge of the premise of prevention programs, the process by which they function and common pitfalls resulting in failure. The course is designed to assist the new practitioner in setting up and starting a crime prevention unit as well providing the practitioner the building blocks toward understanding how they may create their own successful crime prevention programs in our modern society. The course manual and instruction will provide a resource for the student for years to come.

A basic crime prevention course is required for many of the state and national certifications as a Crime Prevention Specialist.

Topics to be addressed:

- History and origins of pro-active policing and prevention
- Community Policing, Problem Oriented Policing, and Crime Analysis links to Crime Prevention
- Crime Prevention in Practice- Crime and Opportunity
- The Crime Prevention Approaches-Everything Old is New Again
- Understanding the Premise and Selecting the Approach (One sized Does Not fit All)
- Overview of specific crime prevention programs; property crime, business crime, fraud, cyber and violence
- Introduction to Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design
- Overview of Target Hardening (Security hardware and methods employed to defeat them.)

Training Seminar Crime Prevention Certification

Instructor:
Richard Arrington

Richard "Rick" Arrington began his law enforcement career in the U.S. Army as a Military Policeman. He began his civilian law enforcement career with the Roanoke City, Virginia Police Department in 1981 and served at the agency for over 26 years in various capacities, retiring as a Zone Commander over one-fourth of the city. During his time with Roanoke, Rick oversaw the community services unit which was developed under his leadership and included all School Resource Officers, D.A.R.E. Officers, the Crime Prevention Unit and the Community Policing/Problem Solving Unit, as well as the Mounted Patrol. He also served in various leadership roles with the state's crime prevention association and led to the creation of the Safer by Design committee to move the concept of Crime Prevention through Environmental Design forward. Rick retired from the Roanoke Police Department in 2006 and was recruited and hired by the Commonwealth of Virginia Department of Criminal Justice Services (DCJS). In 2007 he published his own text entitled, Crime Prevention-A Law Enforcement Officer's Practical Guide (Jones and Bartlett Pub.), which is currently being used by many in the proactive policing field as their desk reference to addressing crime and developing better relationships within their communities. Rick retired from DCJS as the Crime Prevention Programs Manager and crime prevention subject matter expert with the Commonwealth of Virginia in 2018. Arrington opened his own consultant company, Crime Prevention Center for Training and Services, LLC in 2019.
